IDENTIFY PONTOON OF AMUNDSEN'S PLANE

BROKEN PIECE TAKEN TO TROMSOE BY FISHING BOAT

BROUGHT DEATH TO ALL ON THE NIGHT OF JUNE
18TH

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—A pontoon from the missing airplane of Roald Amundsen has been found, it was believed today. The fishing boat Brodd brought to Tromsø a pontoon it had picked up at sea. Comparison with photographs of Amundsen's plane indicated the pontoon belonged to the missing plane.

The captain of the Brodd reported he found the pontoon, which was a section 2 yards long, between the northern coast of Norway and Bear Island, which is halfway to Spitzbergen.

Since the false reports several days ago, however, that Amundsen's plane had been found off the Lofoten Islands, authorities awaited more definite information before setting Amundsen's plane definitely down as lost.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1.—Roald Amundsen and his companions who flew over the Arctic to aid survivors of the wrecked dirigible Italia plunged to death in Barents Sea on the night of June 18, it appeared almost certain today.

A broken pontoon brought into Tromsø by the fishing boat Brodd has been identified as belonging to Amundsen's plane, the Latham.

The pontoon part was identified first by photographs as belonging to the Latham. Later, the French consul at Tromsø informed the United Press that the pontoon was identified by friends of Amundsen's who witnessed the start of his flight. The consul said there was no doubt the pontoon belonged to the plane.

The news caused a sensation throughout Norway.

Authorities were planning to recall all rescue ships searching for Amundsen as soon as it was made official.

The pontoon was found in the open sea between Bear Island which is half way to Spitzbergen and the northern coast of Norway. It was badly rusted and appeared to have been torn violently from the wings of the plane.

It was estimated the accident probably occurred between 7 P. M. and 8 P. M. on the night of June 18, about half way between Norway and Bear Island. The estimate was based on the point where the pontoon was found, and the fact that the last the world heard from Amundsen was at 7 P. M. on that date, when the Geophysical Institute at Tromsø got its final signals from the plane.

Oslo, Sept. 1.—A hint that Roald Amundsen and his companions may have been forced down and made a valiant fight to save themselves before the seas tore their plane to pieces was given today by officers of the French relief ship, Du Quesne.

The officers said new pieces of wood attached to the broken pontoon believed to have been part of Amundsen's plane indicated that repairs had been attempted after the plane left Tromsø.

LEVINE MAY ATTEMPT TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT IN 2 WEEKS

Paris, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—Charles A. Levine has advised officials of Le Bourget field that he may attempt a trans-Atlantic flight from that field, but the attempt will not be made for at least two weeks.

The flight in the new Junkers monoplane that Levine purchased in Germany, can not be made for at least two weeks as the fuel tanks are not sufficiently large for such an undertaking. Bert Acosta, pilot of the machine, believed several tests flights are necessary yet before he can get the plane completely in hand.

WOMAN SAYS SHE FED ARSENIC TO THREE PERSONS

MRS. BERTHA GIFFORD, UNION,
MO., MAKES CON-

AUTHORITIES NOW ASKED TO INVESTIGATE 16 DEATHS IN NEIGHBORHOOD

Union, Mo., Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—The confession of Mrs. Bertha Gifford, a Franklin county farmer's wife, that she fed arsenic to three persons who subsequently died, today brought demands for investigation of 16 deaths.

Several of the fatalities involved patients who were treated by Mrs. Gifford at her home in Catawissa, Mo., known as "the mystery house," during the last 16 years. She now is under indictment for two of the three confessed poisonings.

Mrs. Gifford, before she was ordered by her attorney to cease talking, said that she administered the arsenic to patients "to ease their pains."

In connection with the investigations, authorities checked 11 separate dates on which Mrs. Gifford is recorded to have purchased poison at drug stores. In several instances the dates coincide to the day, or closely, with the death of a patient.

The number of supposed victims rose to 16 with the request of Mrs. Frances Stuhlfelder, of Pacific, Mo., for investigations into the deaths of Bernard Stuhlfelder, 15 months, Margaret Stuhlfelder, 2, Irene Stuhlfelder, 7, and Mrs. Mary Stuhlfelder, grandmother of the three children.

Relatives of Mrs. Bertha Underhill, a late resident of Catawissa, also demanded an investigation of her death on Feb. 9, 1926, after treatment by Mrs. Gifford.

GUNDERSON'S PLACE ON TICKET TO BE FILLED BY SHERWOOD

Alexandria, Minn., Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—Arrangements for funeral services were virtually completed today for Judge Claus J. Gunderson, of the seventh judicial district, who died here yesterday after a month's illness.

One service will be conducted at the veteran barrister's home at 2 p. m. Monday. Another service will be read either in the Congregational church or in the Alexandria armory.

Judge Gunderson, a candidate for re-election this fall, will officially be succeeded by Harrison B. Sherwood, Long Prairie, a defeated candidate in the primary elections.

Sherwood will be opposed by Don M. Cameron, Little Falls; Judge Carroll A. Nye, Moorhead, candidate for Lakes. The Long Prairie candidate re-election, and R. Schroeder, Detroit, polled more votes in the election than Elmer A. Kling, Little Falls, and by a state law automatically moves into the position made by the death of Judge Gunderson.

Governor Christianson is expected to name a temporary judge to occupy Judge Gunderson's bench until the new judge takes oath of office.

St. Paul, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—Governor Christianson's office was unprepared to say today who or when a judge would be appointed in the seventh judicial district to fill the vacancy made by the death of Judge Claude J. Gunderson.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Gloria Gould Bishop, daughter of George Gould of American railroad fame, filed suit for divorce from Henry A. Bishop, Jr., here yesterday. Friends of the young woman here refused to comment or offer reasons for the filing of the suit.

Gov. Alfred E. Smith Is Not What Would Be Called a "Nine O'Clock Guy" In N. Y. Lingo

CANDIDATE IS NEVER IN BED BEFORE MIDNIGHT

IF NAMED PRESIDENT, WHITE HOUSE LIGHTS TO SHINE
LATE

CONSEQUENTLY HE DOES NOT GET UP EARLY IN THE MORNING

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Albany, Sept. 1.—Governor Alfred E. Smith is not what would be called "a nine o'clock guy" in lingo of the east side where he grew up.

If he is elected president, the lights from the White House will shine forth along Pennsylvania Avenue much later than they have in the regime of President Coolidge. The New York governor very rarely goes to bed before midnight and often it is later than that. Consequently, he does not get up until late in the morning.

His entrance into the national political arena as democratic presidential candidate has not changed the New York governor's habits. He has breakfast usually around 11 o'clock these days, and goes to bed late.

Smith likes to work late at night. He wrote much of his acceptance speech after midnight. Things are quiet then, and he can shut himself up in his study at the mansion and devote himself to the task in hand.

Governor Smith is a sociable person. He likes to have his friends and his family about him. The executive mansion in Albany now houses a large number of the Smith family.

If Smith is elected president, he will take them all to the White House with him, and the executive mansion probably will be the scene of many gatherings of friends and relatives such as it has not seen since Roosevelt was president.

Lonoke, Ark., Sept. 1.—The question of Governor Smith's Catholicism in its relation to his presidential candidacy has been brought out as a subject of open campaign discussion by the governor's running mate, Senator J. Robinson.

Robinson speaking at a homecoming celebration held in his honor here yesterday, told his fellow townsmen that Governor Smith had been misinterpreted and that his record in New York state showed "he had not been a Catholic governor, a Baptist governor nor a Methodist governor."

"He has been an American governor," Robinson emphasized.

FUNERAL SERVICES TO BE CON-

LATE TODAY

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—North Dakota paid final tribute today to Governor A. G. Sorlie who died Tuesday at the state capitol.

Thousands of the governor's former friends passed his bier in the city hall where soldiers kept a constant guard of honor.

The chief state executive's body was borne from Bismarck to his home here in a special train yesterday. All along the route little knots of citizens stood with bared heads as the train passed through the rolling lands.

Grand Forks was in deep mourning when the body was removed from the train and the cortege moved to the city hall. Soldiers beat on muffled drums and a band played Chopin's funeral march on muted instruments.

Funeral services will be conducted in the auditorium late today before the governor will be placed in Memorial Park cemetery.

Senator George, of Georgia, who urged that religion should not be mixed with politics and that "we judge our citizens by what they are and what their record shows them to be."

It was indicated by persons in Senator Robinson's party that this meeting was a preface to other pleas for religious tolerance and for the separation of religion and politics which will be made in the democratic campaign, especially in the south, where Robinson will speak extensively.

STEEL IN CONTACT WITH THIRD

New York, Sept. 1.—Almost within a week of the fatal accident on the Interborough Subway lines, another subway accident occurred early today resulting in four injuries.

A 10-car passenger train of the I. R. T., operating on the elevated part of the system side-swiped a supply train. Steel coming in contact with the third rail sent great electric flashes into the air. The 75 passengers on the train, recalling the crash a week ago last night in which 17 persons were killed underneath Times Square, became panic-stricken.

The accident was of no serious consequence. One car of the passenger train was derailed, and four men were injured.

It was reported this morning that the two trains were rounding the curve at about the same time and that the box car on the front of the work train swung out over the track noticeably, swiping the eighth car of the passenger train.

The box car was considerably damaged and the motorman, McDewitt, was injured.

EMPHASIS BY DEMOCRATS ON 'CORRUPTION' ISSUE

FOLLOWING SEN. ROBINSON'S AD-DRESS AT HOT SPRINGS,
ARK.

TERSELY REVIEWS CABINET,
OIL AND ELECTION
SCANDALS

This is the third article of a series discussing presidential campaign issues.

By PAUL FREDRIX
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Sept. 1.—Increasing emphasis by democrats on the issue of "corruption" was foreseen by politicians today following Senator Joseph T. Robinson's address at Hot Springs, Ark.

Robinson, accepting the vice-presidential nomination, devoted the final 1,000 words of his speech to this issue. He tersely reviewed the cabinet, oil and election scandals during the last two republican administrations and summarized by asserting "corrupt elections breed dishonest public officers."

Other democratic orators following suit may make use of the slogan "drive the rascals out," which Sen. Reed of Missouri employed so often in his pre-convention tour.

Robinson referred pointedly, although without mentioning names, to Frank L. Smith's and William S. Vare's large senatorial election expenditures.

He challenged the republicans to explain why their former chairman, Will Hays, "secretly procured" from Harry F. Sinclair "liberty bonds derived from the corrupt business transaction in oil" and then tried to "distribute the bonds among cabinet officers, senators and other republicans of great prestige."

He extended his indictment to include local republican leaders' sale of patronage in Georgia and Mississippi, a matter that will be aired further as the national campaign progresses.

Robinson, following Governor Alfred E. Smith's lead, sought to blame the republican leaders directly for such corruption. He declared "this record could never have been made if the watchmen on the towers had not fallen asleep."

Meantime other factors enter the situation. President Coolidge has named Roy O. West, associate of the utilities leader, Samuel Insull, as secretary of interior to superintend many of the nation's resources. Certain senators have attacked the appointment.

Whereas Robinson said last night that Smith's record had withstood "hostile scrutiny," the governor's Tammany backing has been made a target by such men as Dr. John Roach Straton and William Allen White.

The situation becomes more complicated as election day approaches. No one knows what will happen next.

Dublin, Sept. 1.—His duties as a prince of peace and friendship ended, United States secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg today settled down to a two days' rest.

The last formal affair for Kellogg was given last night. He will rest until Monday and will sail Tuesday from Cherbourg aboard the Leviathan.

The final formal affair for Kellogg held last night was a brief sincere exchange of Irish-American friendship in which 250 persons, including about 30 American residents of Dublin, participated. President Cosgrave, American Minister Sterling, Admiral Burrage and John McCormack attended.

The only speaking came when Governor General McNeill proposed a toast saying:

"We are honoring a man who came to Europe in the cause of peace. I suggest that we give him some of that which he is seeking."

Kellogg replied and again emphasized the cordiality shown by the Irish people.

The high point of the entertainment came when John McCormack sang several Irish ballads including "Kathleen Mavourneen," "She Rested by a Broken Brook," "Birds' Song at Eventide" and "Just for Today."

FRENCH FLIERS FAIL TO SET MARK FOR LONG DISTANCE

Paris, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—The French fliers, Ludovic Arrachart and Georges Rignot, failed today in an attempt to set a new world record for long distance flying.

They were forced to land near Strasbourg at 9:30 a. m., three hours after they left Le Bourget field for Calcutta. A leaking oil pipe brought the plane down.

EMPHASIS BY DEMOCRATS ON 'CORRUPTION' ISSUE

FOLLOWING SEN. ROBINSON'S AD-DRESS AT HOT SPRINGS,
ARK.

TERSELY REVIEWS CABINET,
OIL AND ELECTION
SCANDALS

This is the third article of a series discussing presidential campaign issues.

By PAUL FREDRIX
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Sept. 1.—Increasing emphasis by democrats on the issue of "corruption" was foreseen by politicians today following Senator Joseph T. Robinson's address at Hot Springs, Ark.

Robinson, accepting the vice-presidential nomination, devoted the final 1,000 words of his speech to this issue. He tersely reviewed the cabinet, oil and election scandals during the last two republican administrations and summarized by asserting "corrupt elections breed dishonest public officers."

Other democratic orators following suit may make use of the slogan "drive the rascals out," which Sen. Reed of Missouri employed so often in his pre-convention tour.

Robinson referred pointedly, although without mentioning names, to Frank L. Smith's and William S. Vare's large senatorial election expenditures.

He challenged the republicans to explain why their former chairman, Will Hays, "secretly procured" from Harry F. Sinclair "liberty bonds derived from the corrupt business transaction in oil" and then tried to "distribute the bonds among cabinet officers, senators and other republicans of great prestige."

He extended his indictment to include local republican leaders' sale of patronage in Georgia and Mississippi, a matter that will be aired further as the national campaign progresses.

Robinson, following Governor Alfred E. Smith's lead, sought to blame the republican leaders directly for such corruption. He declared "this record could never have been made if the watchmen on the towers had not fallen asleep."

Meantime other factors enter the situation. President Coolidge has named Roy O. West, associate of the utilities leader, Samuel Insull, as secretary of interior to superintend many of the nation's resources. Certain senators have attacked the appointment.

Whereas Robinson said last night that Smith's record had withstood "hostile scrutiny," the governor's Tammany backing has been made a target by such men as Dr. John Roach Straton and William Allen White.

The situation becomes more complicated as election day approaches. No one knows what will happen next.

FASTEST BOATS IN WORLD TO RACE AT DETROIT, MICH.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—The fastest boats in the world will race here late this afternoon when Marian Barbara Carstairs, the English sports woman, matches her hydroplane Estelle II against Gar Wood's Miss America V, his new Miss America VII and possibly one other United States boat.

Miss America V won the historic Harmsworth trophy in 1926 and this afternoon's race is the result of Miss Carstairs' challenge.

LATVIA, HAITI ARE LATEST TO ADHERE TO PACT

THIS LEAVES 32 NATIONS STILL TO BE HEARD FROM, SAYS
STATE DEPARTMENT

SEVERAL OF LATTER, RUSSIA,
GREECE, ARGENTINE HAVE ADDRESSED NOTES TO U. S.

Washington, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—The number of countries which have subscribed to the anti-war treaty or have formally announced that they will do so was brought to 32 today when Latvia and Haiti informed the state department of their intention to adhere to the pact.

This leaves 32 nations still to be heard from. Several of this latter group, including Russia, Greece and Argentina, have already "addressed communications to the United States on the subject, but these have not yet been received at the state department.

Dublin, Sept. 1.—His duties as a prince of peace and friendship ended, United States secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg today settled down to a two days' rest.

The last formal affair for Kellogg was given last night. He will rest until Monday and will sail Tuesday from Cherbourg aboard the Leviathan.

The final formal affair for Kellogg held last night was a brief sincere exchange of Irish-American friendship in which 250 persons, including about 30 American residents of Dublin, participated. President Cosgrave, American Minister Sterling, Admiral Burrage and John McCormack attended.

The only speaking came when Governor General McNeill proposed a toast saying: "We are honoring a man who came to Europe in the cause of peace. I suggest that we give him some of that which he is seeking."

Kellogg replied and again emphasized the cordiality shown by the Irish people.

The high point of the entertainment came when John McCormack sang several Irish ballads including "Kathleen Mavourneen," "She Rested by a Broken Brook," "Birds Song at Eventide" and "Just for Today."

ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC COASTS LINKED NEARER

AIR-RAIL SERVICE INAUGURATED
BETWEEN TWIN CITIES AND CHICAGO

GIANT TRI-MOTOR 14-PASSENGER
FORD PLANE IN SER-VICE

St. Paul, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—The Atlantic and Pacific coast were brought one day nearer today when air-rail service was inaugurated between the Twin Cities and Chicago.

Transcontinental passengers, aviation and railroad leaders, boarded the plane here after the arrival of east-bound trains, and were whirled away to Chicago, where they were to make connections east.

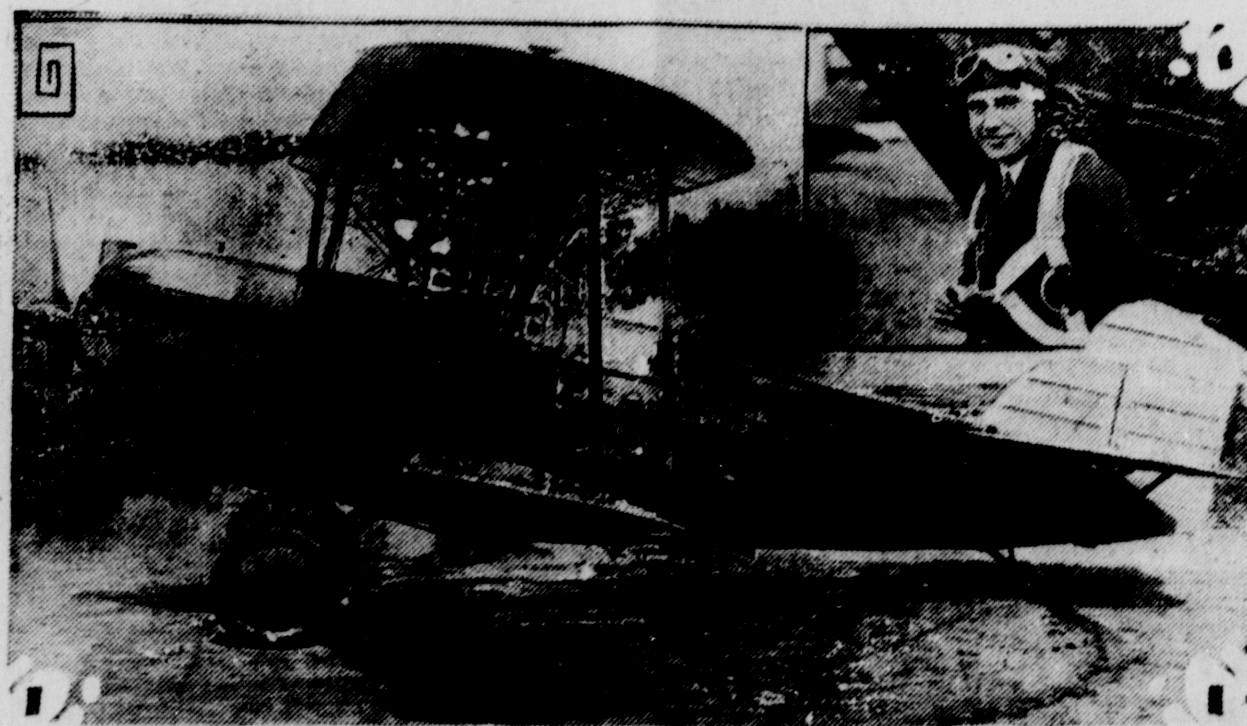

The return trip of the giant tri-motor 14-passenger Ford plane was scheduled for this afternoon to arrive here in time for departure of the limited night trains.

Mayor John Dahl of Fargo, one of the passengers in the maiden eastern voyage of the Northwest Airways, Inc., service, was to continue to New York as an emissary of the north-west.

The regular schedule of the unprecedented service calls for a take-off here at 8:40 A. M. daily and arrival in Chicago at 12:10 P. M. On the return trip the plane will leave Chicago at 3 P. M. and land here at 7 P. M. The all-metal ship is capable of 145 miles an hour.

St. Paul, Sept. 1.—(U.P.)—Gross earnings from Minnesota railroads for the first six months of 1928 brought $3,291,152 into the state coffers, the Minnesota Tax commission revealed today.

Plane in Which Two Fliers Died

They found Lindy's Curtiss Falcon a mass of splinters and twisted steel in deep brush on mountainside near Milford, Pa., while charred bodies of M. M. (Merry) Merrill (inset), manager of Curtiss Flying Service and Lindbergh's friend, and Edward N. Ronne, lay a few feet away. The craft had plunged to its doom while Merrill and Ronne were en route from Buffalo, N. Y., to Curtiss Field, L. I. The wreckage was found by "Casey" Jones, friend and fellow-pilot of Merrill.

LABOR DAY

LABOR DAY in the past meant waving banners, many men marching, bands playing, speakers, picnics, etc. But our respect for labor, our honors paid the cause, can be shown and done without outward show.

Without labor nothing has ever been accomplished. The only place where there was no labor was the Garden of Eden, and when Adam was banished he got his first taste of labor.

In Minnesota many of us observe Labor Day by attending the State Fair where one can see in concrete form the fruits of labor of the fields and factories. Labor hosts of the Twin Cities join in attending the fair and making the day a most successful one.

Here at Brainerd the day is observed in outings of all kinds. People go to the State Fair or to the lakes. People from the cities and out of state visit our lake country.

CRIME NOT A NEW DEVELOPMENT

WE hear much about the crime wave, as though it were something new and exclusive in these days.

Crime is as old as civilization. The first son of the Old Testament murdered his brother, and in the space of some 2,000 years, the world became so wicked that a flood was sent to destroy all the people, save only Noah and his family. History reeks with crime, and some of the horrors of ancient times could hardly be possible in this era.

Here's the record of one day, as told by the St. Cloud Journal-Press twenty-five years ago today:

A 15 year old Minneapolis girl was brutally assaulted.

A New Haven jeweler was arrested charged with many thefts and big robberies, using his store as a blind.

Kid Curly and his gang are charged with wrecking a Great Northern train near Havre, Montana, and getting away with much loot.

An Italian countess is charged with defrauding a New York insurance company, collecting the insurance on her sister's life by false affidavits, sister still living.

Chicago gangs held up and murdered four and wounded several more, with loot of $3,000.

One thousand Turkish troops ambushed and murdered by revolutionists.

Saloon keepers of New York band together as a political body to oppose Mayor Low, because he tried to enforce the law.

A two year old child murdered at Brainerd.

Two Minneapolis boys of 15 arrested for an attempted wrecking of a train.

There were several more lesser crimes, but this will suffice to show that there were bandits and gangs, and youthful criminals a quarter of a century ago.

BRAINERD AIRPORT

THE DISPATCH some time ago received a query from the Oelwein, Iowa, Community club as to the airport here. Publication Thursday of the progress attained at the field indicates that Rosko Brothers are shouldering the major burden of improvement and are making substantial improvements.

Guided by the advice of interested visiting flyers, three runways are being built, roomy enough for any aviator and permitting a takeoff no matter which direction the wind blows.

A copy of the paper will be sent the Oelwein club so they may see what is being accomplished in Brainerd.

Minneapolis now owns its airport through transfer to the Park Board of the deed to Wold-Chamberlain Field. As stated by the Star, experts have given assurance that the city can develop this into one of the finest fields in the country. The Park Board of Minneapolis has promised to do everything possible to make the most of the opportunity.

It proposes a celebration next year to adequately advertise the field, one that would include the greatest aviation display in the brief history of flying in the middle west.

Brainerd, in a modest way through private initiative backed by public sentiment, has made strides too and the completion of the Rosko field should be signalized by some kind of a celebration at the airport.

BEAUTY AS A NATURAL RESOURCE

THE spirit of the times has changed, says the Milan, Minn., Standard. The increase in wealth, leisure and education has now created a demand for and an appreciation of the esthetic values of life. People do not only want to live in beautiful and comfortable homes, but they also want the natural beauties of their surroundings perpetuated and enhanced.

The large cities are gradually eliminating their ugly spots and small towns and villages are building parks and beautifying their streets. Outdoor beauty is something that rich and poor can enjoy and, therefore, is something everybody is interested in.

WHAT SLEEP FOR YOUR CHILD?

DOES your child get the proper amount of sleep, or is he allowed to stay up and become cross and irritable?

Here is the amount of sleep insisted on at Mooseheart, Illinois, the child-city of the Loyal Order of Moose, where upwards of 2,000 children of various ages are given a home, a high school education, and training in a trade:

Up to one year, 16 to 22 hours daily; one to two years, 12 hours daily; three to four years, 11 hours daily; five to ten years, 10 hours daily, with an occasional nap; 11 to 15 years, 10 hours daily; 16 to 19 years, nine hours daily.

MARATHONS AND MARATHONS

BRAINERD and other towns have had their Marathon dances which dragged their weary lengths along. They, because of their very number, are becoming passe.

There is a large field in useful occupations where a Marathon stunt would be real value, as well as entertaining. We refer to a Marathon plowing fields, washing dishes, canning cold pack, etc. That these homely arts of peace are coming to the front is noticeable in our state where the women of Tracy have entered a rag carpet Marathon.

MERCHANTS of the city in general speak of the present tourist and lake season as being the best in the history of the town.

MANY a family in Brainerd is divided in politics. Ma is expressing her opinions.

Folkestone, England, Sept. 1. — (UP) — Ishaak Helmy, Egyptian swimmer, landed here at 1:52 P. M. today after swimming the English Channel from Cape Gris Nez, France. Helmy left Cape Gris Nez at 2:01 P. M. yesterday and was in the water nearly 24 hours. It was the second longest time ever taken to swim the channel. The previous endurance record in that regard was made in 1923 when Henry Sullivan, of Lowell, Mass., swam from Dover to Griz Nez in 27 hours and 42 minutes.

Helmy's time (unofficial) was 23 hours 51 minutes. Capt. Matthew Webb, the first man to swim the channel, took 22 hours and 45 minutes in 1875. The speed record is claimed by Venceslas Spack, a Bohemian, who made it in 10 hours 45 minutes last June.

DEMONSTRATED AT THE WALKER CUP MATCHES

TEAM REPRESENTING U. S. WINS BY THE COUNT OF 11 TO 1

FURNISHES FORECAST OF OUTCOME AT BRAE BURN PLAY

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

Chicago, Sept. 1. — The superiority of American amateur golf over the British brand has been demonstrated amply by the results of the Walker cup matches at Wheaton, where the team representing the United States won by the count of 11 to 1.

An accurate forecast of the outcome of the impending national amateur championship at Brae Burn was furnished by the contest.

Bobby Jones, who will defend his title on the links at West Newton, Massachusetts, in the tournament which starts September 10, overwhelmed his opponent, T. Phillip Perkins, the British amateur champion, 13 up and 12 to play. Jones played par golf under trying conditions in the morning, and was one under four for the six holes necessary to complete his triumph in the afternoon.

No other golfer, American or British, played as well at Wheaton, and it is reasonable to suppose that the next amateur champion of the United States was among the sixteen who contested for the Walker Cup.

So, while Bobby failed to live up to the promise of his amazing practice rounds, the Atlanta golfer has only to retain his present form to stand an excellent chance of winning at Brae Burn.

The rout of the British was not unexpected. Rather, the unusual feature was that they won even a single match. Had Chick Evans, the lone American loser, had his heart in his work, he might well have defeated Tony Torrance, the grizzled Scot, and assisted in the administering of a thorough coat of white wash to the weakest of British teams which ever challenged for the Walker Cup.

If one seeks an amateur golfer to defeat Bobby Jones in the national championship, basing the choice upon the showing made by the contenders at Wheaton, one need look no farther than the slim figure of Francis Ouimet. Well acquainted with the Brae Burn course, due for another title after several years of disappointment, Francis may crash through this year.

It is difficult to picture any amateur in the country defeating Jones, however, provided Bob gets past the 18-hole matches which so often provide devastating upsets in the play for the national title.

At 36 holes, there probably is no amateur living who can keep pace with Bobby. The wagering on the Rube Walberg pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. This victory brings the Mackmen to within two games of the league-leading New York Yankees.

Although out of 16 to 14, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3, and are now only four and one-half games behind the St. Louis Cardinals.

The New York Giants dropped their eighth straight game by losing to the Brooklyn Robins 4 to 2.

Dan Howley's St. Louis Browns returned home to defeat the Detroit Tigers 5 to 2.

The Philadelphia Phillies and the Boston Braves divided a doubleheader. Philadelphia won the first game 4 to 3, and the Braves the nightcap 4 to 1.

PETERSON MAKES HOMER AND DOUBLE FOR FEATURE OF GAME; TEAM GETS 20 HITS

HURR RECEIVES BADLY BRUISED WRIST; LOCALS HAVE BIG INNING IN FIFTH

The Brainerd Northern Pacific baseball team had a big day at Billings yesterday, defeating the Montana team by the score of 14 to 9.

A total of 20 hits and only two errors brought victory to the Brainerd squad. Hurr, local catcher, was injured on his wrist after he accounted for three hits. Peterson contributed to the victory by lacing out a homer and a double for the feature of the game.

Carroll, Billings' plays, scored three men ahead of him when he found the sphere for a four-base clout.

Olsen and Hurr handled the battery duty for Brainerd, with Pokarney, Kenny, Ebelornett and Benson being used by Billings.

Brainerd scored two runs in the third, three in the fourth, six in the fifth, one in the eighth and two in the last inning.

Billings got four in the second, followed with one in the third and scored their last in the seventh when they chalked up four. Billings was credited with 12 hits, with five errors chalked against them.

outcome at Brae Burn will find Jones approximately an even choice against the field.

His successful efforts to save his three companions, who were later rescued by coast guards, weakened him to such an extent that he himself sank of exhaustion.

He Bears the Brunt of the Battle

By QUIN HALL.

SEPTEMBER is the month when the youngsters pack up their books and go back to battle with fractions. It's the month when the third installment of last year's income tax is due and it's the month when the polo fans go loco.

While the interest in polo isn't widespread there is usually an international flavor to the matches played during September and broken collars are not unheard of in the pastime, if one is contemplating the roughness of the sport.

While ten-goal men may mean something to the ardent followers of polo, the sport hasn't reached the point where such fellows are discussed with the same amount of enthusiasm that goes into an argument about home-run swatters by the average fan.

But the polo matches cause society to grow all a-twitter and the results are set up in type and put in the best papers of the country, so there must be something devastating about it, after all.

Right now around New York the Polo fans are waxing enthusiastic over the coming matches (or is it just one match?) between the United States team and the chivalling team from the Argentine.

Consequently, the name of Tommy Hitchcock is being played across the boards by the boys who follow the horseback golf game. Tommy has everything that is demanded of a polo player and with the added duties of captain of the team falling on his shoulders this year it is human for him to feel the extra responsibility.

This year will mark the first competition for the championship of North and South America—the Western Hemisphere. Great Britain has been rather disgruntled because of its inability to hold its own against the United States and the team from the Argentine in practice looks to be capable of giving Hitchcock's four a hard tussle. In case of a victory for the South Americans, the cup will go to that country in its first establishment as a trophy. In that case a challenge will have to come from here with a trip by the United States players to Buenos Aires to try to recover it.

Malcolm Stevenson, one of the greatest No. 3 players the game has ever known, decided to come out of international polo retirement and this has greatly strengthened the U. S. chances. F. Winston Guest, who was a star player at Yale and a substitute on the team which faced the British invaders last year, is another cog around which Hitchcock is building his machine, and it is likely Captain Wilkinson, the Army star, will be the fourth man to take the field against the invaders.

Lewis Lacy, a 10-goal man who has been playing in the British Isles during the Summer months, is the outstanding star of the South American array. The four which will represent the Argentine will be selected from Lacey, Jack Nelson, one of the best players who ever mounted a pony in South America; John Miles, Arturo Korny and Manuel Andradra, the Pampas Indian, a player who has built up a colorful reputation.

From the manner in which the South Americans have been showing up in practice it is easy to predict that the Argentine team will be the most formidable aggregation which the United States has been called upon to meet since 1921.

And it seems that most of the responsibility rests on the shoulders of Tommy Hitchcock. Beside being a star in his position, Tommy, as captain, must build a team which will be able to keep the polo supremacy of the Western Hemisphere in the United States.

It Takes a High Speed Camera

So, while Bobby failed to live up to the promise of his amazing practice rounds, the Atlanta golfer has only to retain his present form to stand an excellent chance of winning at Brae Burn.

The rout of the British was not unexpected. Rather, the unusual feature was that they won even a single match. Had Chick Evans, the lone American loser, had his heart in his work, he might well have defeated Tony Torrance, the grizzled Scot, and assisted in the administering of a thorough coat of white wash to the weakest of British teams which ever challenged for the Walker Cup.

If one seeks an amateur golfer to defeat Bobby Jones in the national championship, basing the choice upon the showing made by the contenders at Wheaton, one need look no farther than the slim figure of Francis Ouimet. Well acquainted with the Brae Burn course, due for another title after several years of disappointment, Francis may crash through this year.

It is difficult to picture any amateur in the country defeating Jones, however, provided Bob gets past the 18-hole matches which so often provide devastating upsets in the play for the national title.

At 36 holes, there probably is no amateur living who can keep pace with Bobby. The wagering on the

PETERSON MAKES HOMER AND DOUBLE FOR FEATURE OF GAME; TEAM GETS 20 HITS

HURR RECEIVES BADLY BRUISED WRIST; LOCALS HAVE BIG INNING IN FIFTH

The Brainerd Northern Pacific baseball team had a big day at Billings yesterday, defeating the Montana team by the score of 14 to 9.

A total of 20 hits and only two errors brought victory to the Brainerd squad. Hurr, local catcher, was injured on his wrist after he accounted for three hits. Peterson contributed to the victory by lacing out a homer and a double for the feature of the game.

Caroli, Billings' plays, scored three men ahead of him when he found the sphere for a four-base clout.

Olsen and Hurr handled the battery duty for Brainerd, with Pokarney, Kenny, Ebelnert and Benson being used by Billings.

Brainerd scored two runs in the third, three in the fourth, six in the fifth, one in the eighth and two in the last inning.

Billings got four in the second, followed with one in the third and scored their last in the seventh when they chalked up four. Billings was credited with 12 hits, with five errors chalked against them.

He Bears the Brunt of the Battle

By QUIN HALL.
When the youngsters pack up their books and go back to battle with fractions. It's the month when the third installment on last year's income tax is due and it's the month when the polo fans go loco.

While the interest in polo isn't widespread there is usually an international flavor to the matches played during September and broken collarbones are not unheard of in the pastime, if one is contemplating the roughness of the sport.

While ten-goal men may mean something to the ardent followers of polo, the sport hasn't reached the point where such fellows are discussed with the same amount of enthusiasm that goes into an argument about home-run swatters by the average fan.

But the polo matches cause society to grow all a-twitter and the results are set up in type and put in the best papers of the country, so there must be something devastating about it, after all.

Right now around New York the Polo fans are waxing enthusiastic over the coming matches (for is it just one match?) between the United States team and the challenging team from the Argentine.

Consequently, the name of Tommy Hitchcock is being played across the boards by the boys who follow the horseshack golf game. Tommy has everything that is demanded of a polo player and with the added duties of captain of the team falling on his shoulders this year it is human for him to feel the extra responsibility.

This year will mark the first competition for the championship of North and South America—the Western Hemisphere. Great Britain has been rather disgruntled because of its inability to hold its own against the United States and the team from the Argentine in practice looks to be capable of giving Hitchcock's four a hard tussle.

In case of a victory for the South Americans, the cup will go to that country in its first establishment as a trophy. In that case a challenge will have to come from here with a trip by the United States players to Buenos Aires to try to recover it.

Malcolm Stevenson, one of the greatest No. 3 players the game has ever known, decided to come out of international polo retirement and this has greatly strengthened the U. S. chances. F. Winston Guest, who was a star player at Yale and a substitute on the team which faced the British invaders last year, is another cog around which Hitchcock is building his machine, and it is likely Captain Wilkinson, the Army star, will be the fourth man to take the field against the invaders.

Lewis Lacy, a 10-goal man who has been playing in the British Isles during the Summer months, is the outstanding star of the South American array. The four which will represent the Argentine will be selected from Lacey, Jack Nelson, one of the best players who ever mounted a pony in South America; John Miles, Arturo Kenny and Manuel Andraza, the Pampas Indian, a player who has built up a colorful reputation.

From the manner in which the South Americans have been showing up in practice it is easy to predict that the Argentine team will be the most formidable aggregation which the United States has been called upon to meet since 1921.

And it seems that most of the responsibility rests on the shoulders of Tommy Hitchcock. Being a star in his position, Tommy, as captain, must build a team which will be able to keep the polo supremacy of the Western Hemisphere in the United States.

Save a goodly supply of your fruit jars for this delicious fruit. Every member of the family will enjoy its rare, piquant flavor—its beautiful color and rich lusciousness. Prunes are healthful and add zest to any meal. Don't be afraid of putting up too many—you'll be surprised how often you will want to serve them.

Sometimes Called "Blue Plums"

Fresh prunes are far different from dried prunes. Plums and prunes are both dried and called "prunes," but the Italian prune, grown in Southern Idaho, Eastern Washington and Eastern Oregon, is generally sold fresh. In some sections these are called "big blue plums," but they are sweeter, more firm and more wholesome than any plum, and more tart and a finer flavor than any other prunes. Ask for them as fresh prunes—not plums.

There's nothing like home-canned fruit—your own. The canning season this year should be called "Opportunity Season"—it is the housewife's chance to prepare for winter meals when fresh fruits are not available—her chance to get the pick of the fruit, prepare it with pure sugar, and seal up the goodness for later appreciation. There are lots of peaches and prunes this year—so plentiful that the housewife could gain by canning two years' supply. Modern methods make home canning easy, and next winter, she thinks of the jars of dessert downstairs all ready to be eaten with little or no preparation, she'll be mighty glad she canned that fruit.

HOT PACK METHOD

This method combines the advantages of the Open-Kettle and Cold Pack Methods. The fruit has the same texture throughout the year, and bacteria are killed in the pre-cooking process. Also, the fruit is kept from discoloring. In case of peaches, remove skins by blanching (unless ripe enough to do so without this process); in canning prunes, simple pit and halve—do not remove skins. Add fruit to boiling syrup—which has been made from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ cup sugar for each cup of water and has been boiled 5 minutes. Precook for 5 minutes at simmering point. Fill container while boiling hot, and "paddle" the sides before placing cover on, and process immediately. Proceed 12-15 minutes; seal immediately. It is not necessary to add extra juice.

COLD PACK METHOD

Prepare the fruit carefully, selecting it with attention to ripeness. In case of peaches, remove skin by blanching, pit and halve. If prunes are to be canned, it is only necessary to wash and pit the fruit. Do not remove the skin of prunes. Make a syrup of sugar and water, cup for cup, and let boil 5 minutes. Fill the jars with the hot syrup, taking care to "paddle" well around the sides to allow air bubbles to escape, and place jars in the hot water bath. The water around the jars should boil 15 to 25 minutes, depending upon the firmness of the fruit. Jars should be sealed immediately upon removal from water. When cool, wrap in paper and store in a dark, dry place.

OPEN KETTLE—Cook fruit in a medium syrup, in a sauce pan, until tender. Place in hot sterile jars, fill with boiling syrup and seal immediately. If desired, the syrup the fruit is cooked in may be retained and used for jelly making, and fresh syrup poured over the cooked fruit.

OVEN METHOD—Wash and pack fruit into hot sterile jars to within 1 inch of the top. Put sterile rubbers in position. Pour over the fruit the boiling hot syrup to cover. "Paddle" to remove air bubbles. Adjust lid loosely. Place in oven at 275 degrees for one hour. Remove and seal immediately.

PRESSURE COOKER—Follow general pressure cooker directions. Sterilize at 5 to 10 pounds pressure for 10 minutes.

AGENT'S KIN VISITS OLD INDIAN RUINS

C. C. Herriman, Grandson of Major D. B. Herriman, Sees Old Gull River Agency

HISTORY RECALLED

Location of Agency and Red River Trail Established by T. B. Crosswell

On the shores of Crow Wing river near the entrance of Gull River stood a middle-aged man gazing thoughtfully into the underbrush that covered the crude excavation of what at one time was the foundation of the now historic Gull River Indian Agency.

As he gazed he attempted to cast aside the veil that separated the years back to the time when the northwest was in its infancy and what is now Crow Wing county was but a vast tract of unsettled land, more populated with Indians than white men. He tried to picture his grandfather standing beside the log construction gazing methodically into the distance over the water for sight of the steamboat that chugged with exertion up the stream with mail and provisions. He tried to picture the problems that confronted his grandfather as he filled the duties of Indian agent, judge, doctor, interpreter, peacemaker. He tried ever so hard to fathom the depths of the little known past.

The man was C. C. Herriman of Des Moines, Ia., grandson of Major D. B. Herriman who in 1853 was Indian agent at the Gull River agency.

Mr. Herriman visited for the first time this week the location of the old agency which has long ago been destroyed. Judge L. B. Kinder, historian of the Crow Wing County Historical society accompanied him and gave him a mental picture of what the agency resembled as told in data gleaned from early settlers who preserved writings of their fathers.

The Gull River Indian Agency was established in 1849 and sold in 1864 when the Indians moved farther north. It covered a territory of about 18 miles by 25 miles and extended from the mouth of the Crow Wing river and included all of Gull Lake.

Major Herriman after serving a number of years as Indian agent moved to Iowa where he settled on a large tract of land and established the town of Wadena. The Minnesota city of Wadena was also named by Major Herriman. It was during his service at the agency that the Indian mission on Gull Lake flourished. This mission was located on the property now owned by F. W. Wialand.

In 1855 the Indians incited by the half breed son of James Tanner, a white boy who was kidnapped in Ohio and brought to Minnesota about 1812, started an insurrection at the Gull River Agency, burning the store of George Bongka, a negro Indian. The Indians became so threatening that Major Herriman called on Fort Ripley to protect the agency. Again in 1857 upon withdrawal of troops at Fort Ripley, Gull River Indians became unruly murdering some of the whites. Troops quelled the insurrection.

While in this district Mr. Herriman was the guest of his cousin, E. L. Guin at Crooked Lake.

Location is Definite

Thanks to T. B. Crosswell of Brainerd, the Crow Wing County Historical society has been fully informed as to the location of the agency. All that remains of the agency are holes where the cellars of several of the buildings were and a large clearing.

In preliminary work of establishing the Stoner dam, Mr. Crosswell cruised this territory closely and acquainted himself with all the old landmarks. In addition, Mr. Crosswell's uncle, who as a boy visited the vicinity at the time of the Hole-In-The-Day outbreak, pointed out to Mr. Crosswell the location of the agency. Under his guidance Mr. Crosswell has traced out the old Red River trail, the trail originally known as "The Woods Trail," established by the Hudson Bay Company.

Red River Trail Route

From Ft. Snelling, Minn., a military road followed a route to old Crow Wing to a point where a ferry crossed the Mississippi river and it was there that the trail struck through the woods to Ottertail Lake, then in a northerly direction to Pembina. The purpose of this trail was to avoid Sioux Indians who sometimes interfered with the prairie trails and were hostile to the Hudson Bay company. It also was generally used as a winter trail. The carts that were used principally on this trail became known as the Red River carts. They were made entirely of wood and leather and went in trains numbering up to 100 carts. The wheels were six feet in diameter and each cart was pulled by an ox. The trail may be still be identified by the deep ruts made by the heavy wheels. Mr. Crosswell's uncle first came to this vicinity to visit his elder brother, a soldier in one of the Minnesota companies sent to protect this region in 1862 at the time of the Hole-In-The-Day outbreak. The place where the soldiers camped, just above the bridge near the dam where the Red River trail forded the river can still be seen. About 300 feet below the dam is the place where that famous frontiersman, Anson Northrup dismantled his steamer "North Star." This steamer was brought from Minneapolis over Sauk Rapids and Little Falls and made several trips as far as Pogoama Falls, now Grand Rapids. Competing for a prize of $2,000 offered by the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce to the first boat to cruise the Red River, Northrup ran his steamer up the Crow Wing river to the place mentioned. There all machinery and moveable parts were loaded into 70 Red River carts and taken up the Red River trail to the Red River of the north. It was the first boat to cruise the river. Later Captain Russell Blakely was sent from St. Paul to operate the boat. When the river lowered, dams were built of logs and at the rise of the water the dam was opened and the boat followed the stream down the river much in the same way as logging operations are carried on.

The Red River trail was also the road followed by the company of soldiers from Fort Ripley sent in 1857 to build Ft. Abercrombie on the Red River. The Crow Wing County Historical society has in its possession a photograph of the map of this trail in 1855 made by Captain Holmes who surveyed the trail. This map, part of the Leon E. Lum collection, was recently donated to the society by Dr. Lum of Duluth.

PEACHES NOW ARRIVING

First Shipments of Yakima Elberta Peaches Are Coming to Local Markets

The first shipment of Yakima Elberta peaches has just reached the local markets and women who have been looking forward to their arrival are now preparing to "put up" their next year's supply of this favorite fruit. In fact many women, it is declared, are planning to can a sufficient quantity to last them over two years, as word has been received that the peach crop is plentiful this year. Usually peaches run in two year cycles, it is explained, one year a full crop and the next a small crop, and as this fruit, when canned by modern methods, will keep in good condition for several years, a spirit of thrift recommends taking advantage of the bountiful year.

The Elberta peach as grown in the Yakima Valley in eastern Washington is large, colorful, juicy and of rich flavor. It has excellent shipping qualities. It is a yellow freestone and is the variety most largely used for canning. The J. H. Hale is another splendid peach that is also grown commercially in the Yakima Valley and some of these peaches may reach the local market. This peach is highly flavored and has a very fine-grained meat, and when it can be obtained is a prime favorite.

APRON PARTY

Given by the Willing Workers Class of the Swedish Bethany Church

After the program those present were seated at tables in the church parlors, at places numbered corresponding to those on the apron pocket, and a delicious lunch was enjoyed. The balance of the evening was spent in a social time, both young and old joining in the pleasure. The proceeds of the evening will be used by the class for the church building fund, and other activities they have undertaken.

The members of Willing Workers class of which Arthur T. Anderson is the teacher are: Kenneth Anderson, Donald Anderson, Bert Erickson, Lawrence Fryklind, Ruth Fallquist, Loraine Fryklind, Julia Peterson and Florence Nesheim.

Catching Next Winter's Supply of Vitamines This Summer

Only a few years ago "vitamines" were not known by name, but even then every housewife knew that a liberal supply of fresh or canned vegetables and fruits was necessary to keep her family healthy and strong.

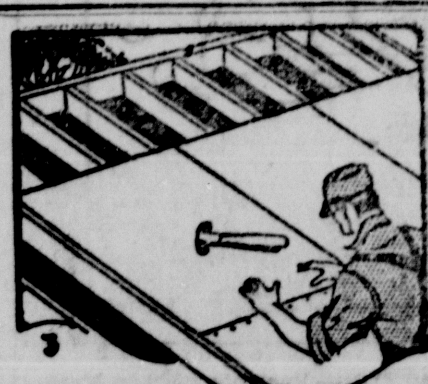

Now that science has brought the various members of the vitamin family—A, B, and C—from their seclusion and introduced them to the public, even more importance attaches to the matter of securing a sufficient supply of the foods which contain these valuable and vital friends of the human body.

By some of the mysterious chemistry of fresh air, rich soil and sunshine, these energizing elements are stored up most abundantly in the fruits and vegetables which ripen during the summer months and to preserve them for the family use throughout the remainder of the year devolves upon the art of the home canner.

When the brilliant sunshine and invigorating mountain breezes have painted the blush on the cheeks of the beautiful Elberta peaches of the Yakima Valley which are now coming in the Brainerd markets or dyed with royal purple the Italian prunes of the Intermountain region, the experienced home-canner knows that the time has arrived for her to catch her next winter's supply of vitamins.

So she brings her jars and canning kettles and captures the richness and delicate flavor of these choice fruits, sealing it up and storing it on her pantry shelves, to be used plentifully throughout the winter months.

AGENT'S KIN VISITS OLD INDIAN RUINS

C. C. Herriman, Grandson of Major D. B. Herriman, Sees Old Gull River Agency

HISTORY RECALLED

Location of Agency and Red River Trail Established by T. B. Crosswell

On the shores of Crow Wing river near the entrance of Gull River stood a middle-aged man gazing thoughtfully into the underbrush that covered the crude excavation of what at one time was the foundation of the new historic Gull River Indian Agency.

As he gazed he attempted to cast aside the veil that separated the years back to the time when the northwest was in its infancy and what is now Crow Wing county was but a vast tract of unsettled land more populated with Indians than white men. He tried to picture his grandfather standing beside the log construction gazing methodically into the distance over the water for sight of the steamboat that chugged with exertion up the stream with mail and provisions. He tried to picture the problems that confronted his grandfather as he filled the duties of Indian agent, judge, doctor, interpreter, peacemaker. He tried ever so hard to fathom the depths of the little known past.

The man was C. C. Herriman of Des Moines, Ia., grandson of Major D. B. Herriman who in 1853 was Indian agent at the Gull River agency.

Mr. Herriman visited for the first time this week the location of the old agency which has long ago been destroyed. Judge L. B. Kinder, historian of the Crow Wing County Historical society accompanied him and gave him a mental picture of what the agency resembled as told in data gleaned from early settlers who preserved writings of their fathers.

The Gull River Indian Agency was established in 1849 and sold in 1864 when the Indians moved farther north. It covered a territory of about 18 miles by 25 miles and extended from the mouth of the Crow Wing river and included all of Gull Lake.

Major Herriman after serving a number of years as Indian agent moved to Iowa where he settled on a large tract of land and established the town of Wadena. The Minnesota city of Wadena was also named by Major Herriman. It was during his service at the agency that the Indian mission on Gull Lake flourished. This mission was located on the property now owned by F. W. Wicland.

In 1855 the Indians incited by the half breed son of James Tanner, a white boy who was kidnapped in Ohio and brought to Minnesota about 1812, started an insurrection at the Gull River Agency, burning the store of George Bonga, a negro Indian. The Indians became so threatening that Major Herriman called on Fort Ripley to protect the agency. Again in 1857 upon withdrawal of troops at Fort Ripley, Gull River Indians became unruly murdering some of the whites. Troops quelled the insurrection.

While in this district Mr. Herriman was the guest of his cousin, E. L. Guin at Crooked Lake.

Location is Definite

Thanks to T. B. Crosswell of Brainerd, the Crow Wing County Historical society has been fully informed as to the location of the agency. All that remains of the agency are holes where the cellars of several of the buildings were and a large clearing.

In preliminary work of establishing the Stoner dam, Mr. Crosswell cruised this territory closely and acquainted himself with all the old landmarks. In addition, Mr. Crosswell's uncle, who as a boy visited the vicinity at the time of the Hole-In-The-Day outbreak, pointed out to Mr. Crosswell the location of the agency. Under his guidance Mr. Crosswell has traced out the old Red River trail, the trail originally known as "The Woods Trail," established by the Hudson Bay Company.

Red River Trail Route

From Ft. Snelling, Minn., a military road followed a route to old Crow Wing to a point where a ferry crossed the Mississippi river and it was there that the trail struck through the woods to Ottertail Lake, then in a northerly direction to Pembina. The purpose of this trail was to avoid Sioux Indians who sometimes interfered with the prairie trails and were hostile to the Hudson Bay company. It also was generally used as a winter trail. The carts that were used principally on this trail became known as the Red River carts. They were made entirely of wood and leather and went in trains numbering up to 100 carts. The wheels were six feet in diameter and each cart was pulled by an ox. The trail may be still be identified by the deep ruts made by the heavy wheels. Mr. Crosswell's uncle first came to this vicinity to visit his elder brother, a soldier in one of the Minnesota companies sent to protect this region in 1862 at the time of the Hole-In-The-Day outbreak. The place where the soldiers camped, just above the bridge near the dam where the Red River trail forded the river can still be seen. About 300 feet below the dam is the place where that famous frontiersman, Anson Northrup dismantled his steamer "North Star." This steamer was brought from Minneapolis over Sauk Rapids and Little Falls and made several trips as far as Pigeon Lake, now Grand Rapids. Competing for a prize of $2,000 offered by the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce to the first boat to cruise the Red River, Northrup ran his steamer up the Crow wing river to the place mentioned. There all machinery and moveable parts were loaded into 70 Red River carts and taken up the Red River trail to the Red River of the north. It was the first boat to cruise the river. Later Captain Russell Blakely was sent from St. Paul to operate the boat. When the river lowered, dams were built of logs and at the rise of the water the dam was opened and the boat followed the stream down the river much in the same way as logging operations are carried on.

The Red River trail was also the road followed by the company of soldiers from Fort Ripley sent in 1857 to build Ft. Abercrombie on the Red River. The Crow Wing County Historical society has in its possession a photograph of the map of this trail in 1855 made by Captain Holmes who surveyed the trail. This map, part of the Leon E. Lum collection, was recently donated to the society by Dr. Lum of Duluth.

PEACHES NOW ARRIVING

First Shipments of Yakima Elberta Peaches Are Coming to Local Markets

The first shipment of Yakima Elberta peaches has just reached the local markets and women who have been looking forward to their arrival are now preparing to "put up" their next year's supply of this favorite fruit. In fact many women, it is declared, are planning to can a sufficient quantity to last them over two years, as word has been received that the peach crop is plentiful this year. Usually peaches run in two year cycles, it is explained, one year a full crop and the next a small crop, and as this fruit, when canned by modern methods, will keep in good condition for several years, a spirit of thrift recommends taking advantage of the bountiful year.

The Elberta peach as grown in the Yakima Valley in eastern Washington is large, colorful, juicy and of rich flavor. It has excellent shipping qualities, it is a yellow freestone and is the variety most largely used for canning. The J. H. Hale is another splendid peach that is also grown commercially in the Yakima Valley and some of these peaches may reach the local market. This peach is highly flavored and has a very fine-grained meat, and when it can be obtained is a prime favorite.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

PRETTY Janet Wilde is the daughter of the great actor, Fenimore Wilde, a Broadway favorite. Her brother, Frank, like his father, is a spendthrift and Janet is hard put to keep up the little home despite her father's large income. She mothers them both devotedly and on the eve of a great opening night for her father, she is worried over his failing health and his many financial troubles. She, in the meantime, has fallen in love with a young actor, Gordon Pryor. The girl realizes that Pryor has yet to make his way on the stage, but she determines to add him to her collection of "children."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

FENIMORE WILDE sprang to his feet.

"If they had announced the President of the French Republic or the King of Siam, I shouldn't have been more surprised, John," he extended his hand. "I have known you more years than I care to remember, and this is the first time you have been in my house."

"I never go anywhere, Fenimore. My life is cast in offices and the theatre," the producer answered, as he glanced at Janet.

"My child, Janet," Fenimore Wilde explained, "Janet, you have heard of John Montague from your cradle up. Well, here he is!" Janet shook hands with the great producer. He was, as she knew, a few years younger than her father, a short, stockily-built man, with a big beak of a nose, intensely marked black eyebrows, and piercing brown eyes. He was nearly bald, but what hair there remained to him was barely touched by grey, and was either naturally black or dyed. He barely acknowledged Janet's greeting, and turned to his greatest star.

"I have to break our luncheon engagement, Fenimore," he explained. "As you are the worst tempered man on the American stage, I knew you would never believe it if I telephoned to you, and I have too many dollars at stake tomorrow night to have you get nervous. I decided that the only thing I could do was to drive down in person. How's the temper now?"

"To me it is an extraordinary thing," Fenimore Wilde said in his most charming voice, "that the mildest, least temperamental, easiest-to-live-with actor ever born should have been labelled—labelled, John—with this false reputation of temperamental. I'm as placid as an old sheep, as prosaic as a book-keeper—and if you don't believe me ask my little girl here!"

"His little girl, Mr. Montague, has learned enough of a great actor's temperament always to be discreet. And the most discreet thing I can do is to leave you two alone."

Janet nodded, smiled, and passed out of the room. She was busy with her household duties when she heard John Montague's departure, and a few minutes later her father's voice came to her as he was talking over the telephone.

"I was lunching with John Montague," she heard him say dulcetly, "but I wanted to see you so much more that I broke the engagement. As you know, I open tomorrow night, and if you will give me lunch, dear lady, that will soothe my nerves more than anything, if you can put with a poor actor. It is your fault for being so beautiful, for beauty is my inspiration, and I must be inspired tomorrow."

"So now we know all about the jeweller's bill for eight hundred dollars," Janet smiled down at Critic, who was curled at her feet. "Well, that's splendid! The darling will be kept quiet this afternoon, and you and I, Critic, will only hope that he will stick to the same inspiration until he has read once again that he is the greatest living actor."

Janet heard her father go upstairs to finish dressing, and she was planning that evening's dinner with Elizabeth, when she was interrupted by a visit from Mr. Samuel Riegel.

This was not the first time by any means that Janet had interviewed Mr. Riegel, an unpleasantly greasy gentleman, whose manner was becoming more and more threatening.

"Now Miss Wilde," Mr. Riegel was saying, "we are not an instalment house. When we sold your father that library furniture, nothing was said about payment, and I'm here to make a last appeal to you. We have to receive a very substantial payment on account, or we take it to the Courts."

Janet was explaining how her father could not be disturbed until after the opening of the new play when Fenimore Wilde came briskly downstairs.

"I was just saying that my firm must have a very substantial payment, Mr. Wilde," Mr. Riegel barked at him. "You can't stall us any longer, and we mean business."

There followed a deplorable scene. It is regrettable to state that Fenimore Wilde, forgetting the presence of his daughter, swore as lustily and as profusely as any sailor on the seven seas. "No man can talk to me like that!" Mr. Riegel exclaimed. "That settles it, and this case goes to the lawyers."

He left, slamming the front door after him, when Janet became alarmed as she saw her father's expression. He had become a curious gray-white and was shaking all over.

He sank into a deep armchair, and Janet ran to where she kept aromatic spirits of ammonia in the dining-room sideboard. She hurried back with the dose, and held the glass to her father's lips as his hands were shaking too nervously for him to grasp it. "Don't talk, dear," she said softly.

"Of all impertinent—" he began.

Perceiving that he would work himself up into a dangerous rage again, and terrified after what doctor had told her of her father's heart, Janet played her last card. "Father," she interrupted him, "think of your public. You don't belong to yourself. You've always said that yourself. You belong to your public, and is that public to be disappointed of your finest work tomorrow night—just because of a worm such as that fellow? You are giving him undue importance. You are letting him rob your audience."

"Yes!" he murmured, quiet at last. "You are quite right, my child. Quite right! My public—my dear public—they must not be disappointed! I owe it to them, and, I went on with unconscious humor, 'what Fenimore Wilde owes—he pays!'"

He liked the phrase so much that he repeated it, as happily he sent Peter for a taxi cab.

"What Fenimore Wilde owes—he pays!"

He drove smilingly away, and Janet with a whimsical expression of despair called up the manager of the furniture firm and talked gravely and efficiently to him.

"I will see that you get a check in full settlement," Janet agreed, after the manager had consented to the arrangement. "But if you send another collector here to annoy Mr. Wilde meanwhile, I withdraw that promise."

Then, having helped father, brother and household, at last she was free to dress for her luncheon engagement with Gordon Pryor.

As she pinned some of her garden in her coat, Janet turned to speak to her favorite confidante—that friend who never gossiped.

"You see, Critic dear," she said in a low voice, "even if I say 'Yes' to what Gordon is going to ask me, there still will remain the problem of finding someone who can look after Father."

Elizabeth called from the foot of the stairs.

"Miss Janet, Mr. Pryor is here!"

How Helen's Long Skirts Shocked the Couturiers

Photo of Helen Hills in the recent national championships, showing the modest costume which she herself designed. The skirt hangs just below the knee, while the abbreviated sleeves come mid-way to her elbow. Superimposed are two cartoons from an English periodical, contrasting the long skirted tennis girl of '98 with the bounding court queen of today.

By SHIRLEY KIRKE

New York (H.N.)—When pretty Helen Hills appeared on the tennis courts at Wimbledon, England, to battle for the women's championship of the world, there were shocked cries of disapproval from the eminent French couturiers who create the styles in court costumes.

"Her skirt is wide and three inches too long!" they exclaimed. "And her blouse is loose and comes over her shoulders, instead of being tight and cut out around the armholes, like a bathing suit. It isn't chic!"

When Helen of America was told of the criticism she gave her faint, non-committal smile and said nothing. But she swept through the remaining matches to win the world title without any difficulty. You may tag your own moral, if any, to this story. Helen designs her own costumes for freedom of movement. They're pretty, too, but hardly could be called daring.

The photo above shows Helen as she appeared at the Forest Hills, L. I., championships, while superimposed are two cartoons from a British periodical contrasting the long-skirted tennis girl of 1898 with the modern bounding queen of the grass courts.

You belong to your public, and is that public to be disappointed of your finest work tomorrow night—just because of a worm such as that fellow? You are giving him undue importance. You are letting him rob your audience."

"Yes," he murmured, quiet at last. "You are quite right, my child. Quite right! My public—my dear public—they must not be disappointed! I owe it to them, and I went on with unconscious humor, 'what Fenimore Wilde owes—he pays!'"

He liked the phrase so much that he repeated it, as happily he sent Peter for a taxi cab.

"What Fenimore Wilde owes—he pays!"

He drove smilingly away, and Janet with a whimsical expression of despair called up the manager of the furniture firm and talked gravely and efficiently to him.

"I will see that you get a check in full settlement," Janet agreed, after the manager had consented to the arrangement. "But if you send another collector here to annoy Mr. Wilde, meanwhile, I will withdraw that promise."

Then, having helped father, brother and household, at last she was free to dress for her luncheon engagement with Gordon Pryor.

As she pinned some of his gardenias in her coat, Janet turned to speak to her favorite confidante—that friend who never gossiped.

"You see, Critic dear," she said in a low voice, "even if I say 'Yes' to what Gordon is going to ask me, there still will remain the problem of finding someone who can look after Father."

Elizabeth called from the foot of the stairs.

"Miss Janet, Mr. Pryor is here!"

How Helen's Long Skirts Shocked the Couturiers

Photo of Helen Wills in the recent national championships, showing the modest costume which she herself designed. The skirt hangs just below the knee, while the abbreviated sleeves come mid-way to her elbow. Superimposed are two cartoons from an English periodical, contrasting the long-skirted tennis girl of '98 with the bounding court queen of today.

By SHIRLEY KIRKE

New York (HN).—When pretty Helen Wills appeared on the tennis courts at Wimbledon, England, to battle for the women's championship of the world, there were shocked cries of disapproval from the eminent French couturiers who create the styles in court costumes.

"Her skirt is wide and three inches too long!" they exclaimed. "And her blouse is loose and comes over her shoulders, instead of being tight and cut out around the armpoles, like a bathing suit. It isn't chic!"

When Helen of America was told of the criticism she gave her faint, non-committal smile and—said nothing. But she swept through the remaining matches to win the world title without any difficulty. You may tag your own moral, if any, to this story. Helen designs her own costumes for freedom of movement. They're pretty, too, but hardly could be called daring.

The photo above shows Helen as she appeared at the Forest Hills, L. I., championships, while superimposed are two cartoons from a British periodical contrasting the long-skirted tennis girl of 1898 with the modern bounding queen of the grass courts.
